

The Motör-Dogz

Creating a powerful bond, these dogs and their humans share a passion for travel and adventure.

The ultimate animal-loving couple share their passion for adventure with their furbabies. Together they explore and discover North America's pet friendly vacation locations and establishments. This docu-series examines the ins and outs of travelling with pets.

The connection between a human and their dog is like no other. Separation anxiety is real when the two are apart. When left behind, dogs who experience separation anxiety may become disruptive or destructive. They may urinate, defecate, bark, howl, chew, dig or even try to escape. Furthermore, many pet owners worry about their furbabies as much as they worry about their children putting a damper on any vacation. Stacey and Shannon conquer this by including their pets on their most scenic adventures including motorcycling, snowmobiling, off roading, boating and more.

As they travel to different destinations, they not only explore pet friendly accommodations and restaurants, they also look into unique pet friendly attractions and events that these locations have to offer. Safety is always priority, Stacey and Shannon review various products including pet carriers, safety gear, etc. The show includes tips on training, grooming, caring for, and preparing your pet to travel with you. Interviews with specialists, such as vets, groomers and other pet owners will be incorporated into the tips segment. Of course, nothing is perfect, Shannon and Stacey will share some of the challenges and struggles of travelling with pets.

Is there anything cuter than a fluffy 6lb pomeranian wearing a pair of bright pink goggles riding a motorcycle? Well maybe, how about a big 80lb golden retriever who snowboards or a 55 lb bulldog skateboarding down the street. As the crew travels from destination to destination, they will connect with other extraordinary pets and people. Pet owners and motorcycle enthusiasts band together.

People are drawn in by motorcycles and cute animals. Visualize a motorcycle pulling up to a red light and the people in the car next to you, roll down their window to hear the rumble of the engine. Eyes glued to shiny chrome and sparkling paint. Now, imagine their faces, when a small dog pops their head out of their carrier wearing a pair of goggles....
